Overview: 2024 Fund Performance and Top 10 Rankings over 1, 3, 5 and 7 Years

Performance data in the 12 months to December 2024 across all 900+ funds in FundMonitors' database, which covers equities, fixed income, property, infrastructure, alternatives, and digital assets, highlights the mix of outcomes and the importance of careful research across both asset class and fund selection.

In the short term - December - global and Asia-focused equity categories delivered mostly positive returns: Leading the way was Equity Long - Asia, up 3.32%, while Equity Long - Large Cap - Global gained 1.24% and Equity Long - Small/Mid Cap - Global added a modest 0.07%. Meanwhile, Australian equities struggled, with Equity Long - Small/Mid Cap - Australia falling 1.58% and Equity Long - Large Cap - Australia down 2.92%. Fixed income categories made slight gains, while Property (-3.53%) and Infrastructure (-2.57%) experienced declines. The table below shows the highest and lowest returns seen within each broad peer group and across the entire database, both during the month of December 2024 and across the full calendar year.

Looking at longer-term performance data paints a brighter picture for 2024. Global equities posted standout 12-month returns, with the All Countries World Index (AUD) soaring 29.68%, while the Global Equity Long - Large Cap and Equity Long - Small/Mid Cap peer groups delivered 22.01% and 22.8% respectively. Australian small/mid cap funds saw solid returns as well, albeit not as significant as those seen among their global equity counterparts, gaining 13.87% and edging ahead of the ASX200's 11.44%, while Australian large cap funds delivered 10.48%.

In Fixed income, the various peer groups also produced positive results over the year, with hybrid credit returning 10.14% and the Bonds, Credit and Debt peer groups returning 4.82%, 7.26% and 7.79% respectively, while the broader bond market was up 2.5%. Property saw a slight dip of -0.11%, while Infrastructure rose 9.67% despite lagging behind the S&P Global Infrastructure Index's 28.63% surge.

The top-performing funds over the 12 months to December showcased impressive numbers across all categories. Among Australian equity funds, returns of the top 10 performers ranged from 29.74% to 43.27%, topped by the LHC Capital High Conviction Fund. In global and Asian equities, top performers achieved 45.09% to 109.11%, with the Pengana High Conviction Equities Fund taking first place. Property and Infrastructure funds ranged from 17.68% to 34.36%, with Delft Partners Global Infrastructure Strategy claiming the top place. Fixed income funds, which includes Private Credit, delivered between 11.06% and 25.83%, with the Regal Partners Private Fund leading the pack. Alternatives, digital assets, and multi-sector funds posted the broadest range, from 31% to an astonishing 159.56%, with DAFM's Digital Income Fund (Bitcoin Index Class) achieving the highest one-year figure.

Across all 900+ funds Digital Assets stole the show, with some cryptocurrency funds delivering gains of over 70%, albeit with significant volatility. DAFM's Digital Income Fund (Bitcoin Index Class)'s impressive 1-year return of 159.56% placed it first not only within its peer group, but across the entire database.

Top 10's & Track Record

Producing the list of "Top Ten" is always fraught with danger. Assuming that each fund's return is the preferred method, then allocation to asset class or peer group is essential to provide an "apples with apples" comparison.

The next issue lies in the time period and track record of the particular peer group or universe. FundMonitors is as guilty as anyone for providing short term data - either by the month, YTD or over the past year - in spite of clear indications that managed funds should be considered for investing over at least 5 to 7 years. In spite of this at the start of each year, we publish the "Top Ten" list for each category over the past 12 months.

At the same time every fund, encouraged or as required by ASIC, will issue the warning that past performance is no guarantee of future performance. In spite of this, there isn't an analyst, advisor or investor, who doesn't (or shouldn't) consider each fund's longer term track record before investing.

The tables below clearly show this when it comes to analysis of each fund's track record, the most recent 12 months performance is not the best predictor of longer term performance - say over 5 or 7 years: Taking Australian equity funds as an example, the top ten funds over one year to December 2024 with performances ranging from 29.7% to 43.3% provided exceptional returns against the ASX200's cumulative return of 11.44%.

2024 was a strong year for equities – the second in a row – particularly in the US where tech stocks and the "Magnificent 7" in particular drove valuations, and fund returns accordingly. This can be seen in the overall market's longer term returns, showing that over 7 years the ASX200 returned 8.5%, and the All Countries World Index 13.2%, and the S&P500's returns of 25.2 and 26.29% in 2024 and 2023 respectively, although the annualised return over 7 years was a more modest (but impressive) 13.3%.

In this environment chasing the current "hot fund" can be problematic without looking at a longer track record. Only one fund in the 1 Year Top Ten also featured in the 3 year equivalent list, and four funds made it into the Top 10 over both 1 and 7 years. Naturally these numbers are skewed somewhat by the fact that some funds in the 1 and 3 year lists didn't have a 5 or 7 year track record.

Reversing the process – taking the 7 Year Top Ten Funds, gives a better picture of the importance and consistency of performance over time. Five also featured in the 5 Year Top Ten, although all were in the Top 20. While two of them featured in the 3 Year Top Ten, and four in the 1 Year Top Ten, with 260 funds in the 1 Year group it is telling that only one came outside the top quintile, or 20%.

The same applies, with modifications, for Global Equity Funds, with 208 funds competing for a place in the 1 Year Top Ten list. There's a much stronger correlation between long term (7 Year) performance, and appearance in the shorter term lists which comprised a total of 208 funds. Of those in the Top 10 over 7 years, three made it to the 1 Year list, five were in the Top 20, and six in the Top quintile.

Equities vs. Other Asset Classes:

As the most volatile asset class (excluding the Crypto sector of course) the results are likely to be demonstrated more clearly, but the same approach can be followed to show the importance of track record when selecting funds for long term investing.

Conclusion:

Remembering of course ASIC's correct advice that past performance cannot be guaranteed, it should also certainly not be ignored.

And if you ignore past performance, you do so at your own risk. As they say, "while history does not always repeat itself, it frequently rhymes."
