Fund in review

Market and fund commentary

The Australian equity market underperformed in January despite strength in Mining and Metals stocks globally on the back of rising commodity prices. The S&P/ASX 300 Accumulation Index fell 0.77% weighed down by REITs, Industrials, Consumer Discretionary and profit taking in the Banks.

The Australian dollar rallied 4.8% to US$0.759 due to a combination of A$ strength (firmer commodity prices) and US$ weakness (Trump Administration jawboning). Outside of Energy, commodity markets were stronger, led by industrial and precious metals. The iron ore price reached its highest level since September 2014.
