Market Commentary

Global equities returned +2.4% (AUD) in June with a substantially weaker Australian dollar generating most of the return. In local currency terms global equities delivered +0.3% as investors begin the fret over rising trade tensions and the re-emergence of anti-Euro politics in regions like Italy as well as disagreements over immigration.

The Australian equity market again performed well returning +3.2% for the month and 12.7% for the prior 12 months, however we remained concerned regarding local economic conditions. Credit growth is decelerating, and residential prices are falling nationally led by Sydney. Coupled with ongoing weak wage growth and elevated levels of under-employment, the local economic outlook appears challenging.

Recent management meetings support key themes

In June we toured the US, Canada and UK meeting with existing and prospective investees, their competitors and looking for new investment ideas. Overall the outlook was positive, albeit with growth at more modest levels consistent with later cycle positioning. The exception was the industrial sector, where the consensus outlook has become almost euphoric. This makes us cautious and is reflected by the under representation of the sector in the current portfolio.

In the US there was a lot of rhetoric around rising labour costs. For real estate, this is generally positive for the rental cycle as it makes supply more expensive – and in the apartment sector, most landlords expect new supply to abate as we head into 2019. For operating businesses, the opposite is true as rising labour costs can and do become a real headwind to growth.

Fund Commentary

The Fund delivered a robust performance for the month of June, up +4.9% – assisted by a +2.1% benefit from a weaker Australian dollar. We remind investors that our unhedged strategy means our returns will sometimes benefit from an Australian dollar devaluation, but a rising dollar will inevitably detract in the future. What is pleasing is that our underlying 'constant currency' returns continue to meet our investment objective of CPI +5% per annum.

Our underlying return (before the impact of currency) for the six months to June was +4.6%, and for the 12 months +12.2%.

Pleasingly we also outperformed global equities over the same timeframe. All this as global bond yields continued to rise, and the US federal reserve lifted interest rates on three occasions while signalling more later this year. As we have stated in prior publications of Investment Perspectives, higher interest rates do not always result in weak property returns. Of more concern is supply, weak demographics and economic health.

It was a relatively active month for the Fund. Our student accommodation investee, Education Realty Trust (EDR), received an all cash take-over offer from entities associated with Greystar Real Estate Partners. While takeovers are helpful for near term performance, we are somewhat disappointed in the offer price. At $41.50/share EDR is priced at just $109k per bed – a marginal premium to estimated replacement cost of $101k. Moreover, the buyer is acquiring a substantial leasing, asset management and development platform with strong university relationships across the United States. We are in no rush to accept the current offer.

Separately, our decision to hold Hispania Activos despite an April bid from entities associated with Blackstone has reaped additional rewards. During the month the initial all cash offer of €17.45 was revised to €18.25/share with approval from the Board. We believe the management team and Board at Hispania have delivered an excellent outcome for investors. Our total return since our initial investment last year is expected to exceed +70% upon closing.

With the prospect of losing these and another investee (GGP) from take-over, we continue to find attractive investment opportunities and added a new investee during the month in the UK student accommodation space.

For investors who wish to compare us to the Global REIT Index, the Fund continues to outperform, despite a zero weight to Japan which has been one of the strongest returning geographies over the past six months (+13.8% for the six months to June). As long-term investors, we are wary of the demographic headwinds for most forms of Japanese real estate and the rich pricing makes the task of achieving our total return target all the more difficult.
