COMMENTARY

The NWQ Fiduciary Fund (Fund) delivered a return of +0.39% in November. Since inception, the Fund has returned 5.53% p.a.

It was a relatively benign month on the economic and political fronts with market volatility stabilising at low levels across the equity, currency, and fixed income complexes. The accommodative policy settings of central banks globally as well as mixed high-frequency data conspired to push equity markets higher in the US (+3.63%), Australia (+3.28%), Europe (+2.69%), and Japan (+1.61%). The yield curves in both the US and Japan steepened as bond markets sold off (yields rise as prices fall) and the US Dollar rallied (+0.95%). The Australian equity market was led by the IT (+10.98%), Healthcare (+8.87%), and Consumer Staples (+8.25%) sectors with the Financials (-1.51%) sector underperforming. Despite the directional bias in these sector returns there were opportunities within the sectors for the managers to benefit from the relative outperformance of certain stocks compared with others (i.e. those comprising the long and short portfolios respectively).

There continued to be a high degree of dispersion in the returns of the underlying managers during the month of November. This trend continued from the previous month and the Fund's overall positive return demonstrates the benefits of adopting a multi-manager approach when allocating to long/short managers. The Fund's Alpha managers (+0.26%) and Beta managers (+0.21%) contributed positively to overall performance in November.
