

L1 Capital Long Short Fund

Monthly Report | OCTOBER 2022

Fund NAV: $795m

- The L1 Capital Long Short Fund 5.1%¹ in October (ASX200AI 6.0%).
- Over the past 3 years, the portfolio has returned 18.7%¹ p.a. (ASX200AI 4.8% p.a.).
- Global equity markets rebounded in October on speculation that central banks were nearing the peak of policy tightening.

Global equity markets rallied in October with investors expecting the Fed to begin to scale back the pace of its tightening program in the months ahead. We found this move to be surprising for two reasons. Firstly, the Fed has been very clear that it is not close to enacting a policy pivot with inflation still tracking at over 8%. On November 2, Powell stated:

"It is very premature, in my view, to think about or be talking about pausing our rate hikes. We have a ways to go."

Secondly, numerous high quality 'bellwether' companies in the U.S. downgraded their earnings guidance significantly, suggesting the deteriorating macro was beginning to bite. We used the rally to further reduce our market exposure.

The S&P/ASX 200 Accumulation Index returned 6.0% in October. The strongest sectors were Financials (+12.2%), Property (+9.9%) and Energy (+9.5%), while Consumer Staples (-0.2%), Materials (-0.1%) and Healthcare (+0.6%) were the weakest sectors.

Portfolio performance was driven by several positive stock-specific updates along with the broader recovery in global markets.

Key contributors to portfolio performance in October included:

Flutter (Long +17%) shares rose with continued strong momentum from its U.S. business through the start of the key NFL season. The U.S. business moved to positive EBITDA in Q2 2022, well ahead of its peers, and its sports betting market share accelerated to 51% from ~40% six months ago, driven by its superior product, efficient customer acquisition strategies and strong operational execution. The U.S. division is now the largest by revenue for the company, with a clear path to profitability in 2023. This shift to profitability, together with the exponential growth of the U.S. sports betting market, underpins the ability for Flutter to significantly accelerate its earnings growth over the next few years. We believe Flutter remains significantly undervalued given its exceptional growth outlook and dominant industry position.

Mineral Resources (Long +11%) shares performed strongly over the quarter as lithium markets remain tight, supported by demand for electric vehicle batteries. The company is expected to finalise its joint venture agreement with Albemarle (over their jointly owned upstream and downstream lithium assets). This agreement will give clarity to Mineral Resources' lithium portfolio and support full downstream integration for >100kt of lithium hydroxide production. This will also provide the foundation for any possible separate listing of the lithium business in the future. We continue to believe that all key areas of Mineral Resources' business (iron ore, lithium and mining services) have favourable medium-term tailwinds with significant optionality that is not fully reflected in the current share price.

Monthly Report | OCTOBER 2022

Cenovus Energy (Long +31%) shares rallied due to a ~10% increase in the oil price over the month. Given the long-life nature of its oil sands assets and its low cost of production, we estimate Cenovus is free cash flow break-even at an oil price of ~US$40/bbl. Oil prices remain more than double this break-even point, implying considerable free cash flow generation potential for the company at current levels, with Cenovus currently trading on a consensus FY22 free cash flow yield of around 15%. Furthermore, we expect the company to reach its target net debt level of US$4b by early CY23 at which point we expect it will allocate all available free cash flow to shareholder returns.

Qantas (Long +16%) shares climbed after providing a very strong trading update, including first half profit before tax guidance of $1.2b – $1.3b. The earnings guidance was more than 150% above market expectations, driven by strong domestic travel demand and exceptional yield management.

The company has also managed to dramatically reduce its net debt to below the bottom end of its target range with significant headroom for further capital management going forward.

We continue to view Qantas as having emerged from the pandemic even stronger than before, given its $1b cost out program, improved market position and the massive pent-up demand for leisure and business travel, which we expect will persist despite macroeconomic headwinds. If Qantas management can achieve its FY24 targets, there is potential to deliver close to $1 of earnings per share, with Qantas currently trading on only ~6x P/E on that basis. We believe there is significant share price upside through earnings growth and a P/E re-rating as the company's earnings mix shifts towards more predictable domestic earnings and loyalty business.

A key detractor from portfolio performance in October was:

Alibaba Group (Long -21%) shares fell as investor sentiment weakened from COVID-19 policy uncertainty and fears stemming from political changes at the recent National Congress of the Chinese Communist Party. We believe Alibaba's earnings are likely to have bottomed in Q2 and should see a gradual recovery as retail spending recovers post stringent lockdowns. Alibaba remains a high-quality business with leading positions in both eCommerce and Public Cloud. We believe earnings growth in 2023 will be supported by a broader economic recovery as COVID-related restrictions are finally eased.
