Fund highlights

The Fund returned 3.7% (after fees) for the month of September, while the S&P/ASX Small Ordinaries Accumulation Index returned 5.1% and the S&P/ASX Small Industrials Accumulation Index returned 4.3% (the Small Industrials index excludes resources and energy companies, which the Fund does not invest in).

The largest contributors to performance included overweight positions hotel software company Sidewinder, diagnostic imaging provider Capitol Health and youth apparel retailer Universal Store. Shares in Sidewinder surged 29.0% as the market gained confidence in the Company's execution of its new product suite developed through the Smart Platform strategy. Capitol Health added 16.8% as the market continued to position for its merger with imaging peer Integral Diagnostics after receiving informal clearance from the ACCC. Universal continued to show positive momentum following a strong FY24 result, the stock added a further 10.9% in the month of September.

The largest detractors from performance included overweight positions automotive software player Infomedia, marine services contractor Bagman Marine and financial services company Tyro Payments. Infomedia sold off 9.4% after management confirmed one of its key US-based customers had churned from its e-commerce catalogue product, Simpler. Shares in Bagman were down 8.2% on the back of no company specific news. Tyro Payments retraced 7.4% on media speculation the federal Government was looking to make a change to card payment surcharging regulation.

During the month, the fund did not make any significant changes to positioning.

Market overview

Energy was the best performing sector in September, up 9.6%, followed by Materials (+7.1%) and Health Care (+5.6%). Consumer Staples was the worst performing sector over the month, up 0.9%, followed by Information Technology (+2.5%) and Communication Services (+2.7%).

The top performers for the month included luxury e-commerce retailer Cettire, mineral developer Chalice and mining explorer Ioneer. Shares in Cettire surged 77.6% after the Company released audited FY24 accounts with no revenue recognition issues. Chalice Mining and Ioneer jumped 40.6% and 39.4% respectively on the back of positive policy announcements from China which drove a material rally across rare earth commodity markets (including lithium).

The worst performers for the month included casino operator Star Entertainment, biotech Imogene and miner Grange Resources. Star Entertainment ended the month of September down 34.4% after the company restructured its asset base and refinanced its balance sheet. Shares in Imogene were down 21.0% following an underwhelming set of trial data from its Azer-Cel product. Grange Resources retraced 20.2% after the Company was removed from the Small Ordinaries in the September rebalance.

What's making waves

Equity markets rallied hard in the month of September with the Small Ords (+5.1%) outperforming the large cap ASX100 index (+2.8%). Positive market sentiment was driven by the commencement of the US rate cutting cycle which saw the Fed cut 50bps along with stimulus from China that drove particularly strong returns in the energy and material sectors. There were several index announcements in September which impacted stocks held across the Lennox portfolios. This included the addition of Gentrack and Superloop to the ASX300 and HUB24 to the ASX100, all driven by their impressive growth performance and subsequent increase in market capitalisation. Index movements are not something considered at the stock selection stage of the Lennox process, however they play an important role in position sizing considering most of the portfolio sits in a relevant index.
